HighSociety

When my pre-teen daughter gives me the up-and-down scan over my intended outfit, I cross my fingers behind my back that I get a thumbs up - and that I don't have to search through the pile of clothes I left on the floor of my closet during my fashion-crisis moment minutes before.

Fashionistas Find Fun

It's not easy following fashion. The skirts go up and down faster than Silicon Valley businesses. What to wear? ... What to wear?!

When my pre-teen daughter gives me the up-and-down scan over my intended outfit, I cross my fingers behind my back that I get a thumbs up - and that I don't have to search through the pile of clothes I left on the floor of my closet during my fashion-crisis moment minutes before. Why do I care about my daughter's approval? She has good taste. She is a trend-watcher, and I don't want to embarrass her.

Looking for a champagne reception and some direction in fashion, I headed to San Juan Oaks Golf Club in Hollister last Friday afternoon. Morgan Hill Rotary Club held its Second Annual Fashion Show and Tea Luncheon on the Green. Although the closest we got to the green was sipping the bubbly on the terrace, I raised a glass to all those husbands on the course chasing after that little white ball, playing the to their hearts' content while knowing their wives were duly entertained.

Newlywed Stephanie Stafford traded nuptial notes with one-year married Mary Borello, wife of Chris Borello, while Gilroy's Sunrise Rotary members Pat Golden and Sue Thurman marketed their club to San Martin resident Leonette Stafford (San Martin represents fair game to recruiting by northern and southern rotary clubs).

Sponsored by David and Sandra de la Cuesta, the afternoon found guests buying up the "prize in the balloon" balloons, which for one lucky helium hound contained a full day at Cherisse's Day Spa with a limousine ride donated by Night Out Limousine Service. At the signal, all the balloons were popped by the purchasers, and the lucky grand prize winner was Adelita O. King of Heritage Bank.

Other attendees at the event included Christy Arnold, Maryanna Danielson (trading her riding boots for sandals), Lisa DeSilva, Diane Downer, Elaine Ditmore, Fran Chiala and Betty Atkins, former member of South Valley Symphony.

Ciao for now.
